Things My Mother Taught Me

Oct 19 - 28 by Katherine DiSavino
As Olivia and Gabe take the "next step" and move into their first apartment together, both sets of their parents "drop by" from 800 miles away to help them unpack! Can an unfurnished two bedroom apartment hold all the love, laughter, wisdom and worry that four parents can generate? Don't miss this funny and touching romantic comedy about love and family.

A Doll's House, PART 2

Mar 15 - 24 by Lucas Hnath
Knock, knock. You'll never guess who's there. Henrik Ibsen's Nora has returned to the same door she famously slammed 15 years ago when she left her family to "find herself". Universally acclaimed as the best play of the 2017 Broadway season, this smart, funny and utterly engrossing contemporary sequel will keep you talking all the way home. (You will enjoy this play whether you are familiar with A Doll's House or not).

HUMAN ERROR

Jan 25- Feb 3 by Eric Pfeffinger
A blundering fertility doctor mistakenly implants the embryo of an NPR-listening, latte-sipping liberal couple into the womb of a truck-driving, NRA-cardholding conservative family! Get ready for an outrageously funny nine-months of culture shock and clashing values as both couples attempt to become friends for the good of the child. You'll love this timely and provocative new comedy that asks, "Can our similarities ever outweigh our differences?"

Fireflies

May 3 - 12 by Matthew Barber
From the author of Enchanted April, comes a humorous and hopeful love story for feisty women over 50. For anyone who has gotten used to being on their own, falling in love can feel a bit unnerving. Eleanor is a strong woman of a certain age who enjoys the comfort of her routines. But when a charming drifter comes knocking at her door, can the sparks of a late-life romance be trusted, or is there no fool like an old one? Directed by two-time TONY winner Judith Ivey.
